Proposal

You can widen this box if needed

C.11.8 While racing crew are only permitted in the cabin momentarily. It is prohibited to have crew remain below for the purpose of enhancing performance. The companionway is not considered part of the cabin but crew heads and shoulders shall remain above the top level of the cabin.

Reason

The competitors are confused because the "exception" referring to the companionway is not really clear. In the years several judges supplied different interpretations of this rule at main events and created even more uncertainty.

In this way we clear the crew can enter the cabin through the companionway while racing respecting a specific limit.
